

SOCIAL AND OTHER INTERESTS OF WOMEN

Society

In honor of their eighth and tenth birthday anniversaries the Misses Veva and Mildred Watson, 1404 Mishawaka av., were surprised Saturday afternoon by a party of friends. The afternoon was delightfully spent in a variety of games and contests, Miss Peggy Pound winning a favor in the latter. Luncheon was served at a daintily appointed table, covers being placed for 10.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Weber, 622 E. Corby st., entertained a few friends Sunday evening in honor of their guests, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Welti and son, William, jr., of Chicago. Miss Katherine Lederer, Charles Howard and William Welti sang and Dan Hilliard executed an Irish jig. At the close of the evening the hostess served light refreshments.

Miss Esther Platz, 115 E. Dayton st., entertained Saturday evening for her sister, Miss Ruth, who will leave Friday for a western tour. The house was prettily arranged with autumn leaves and fall roses and in the dining room supper was served in four courses at the close of the evening. Among the out-of-town guests were the Misses Millisett Farmington and Bertha Osterstein and Harry Morehead of Chicago and M. W. Mansfield of New York city.

AFTERNOON GOWN IN MOLE CHARMEUSE

SOC-AD AFTERNOON GOWN

Smart afternoon dress in mole charmeuse. The bodice forming a bolero, fastens in the front by the last button of the two rows which trims the front with the same material loops. The bolero is open over a cross band over the crossed and a crossed sash of white net over the low neck. At the side chest and under the arm a wide band of material is fixed on the bolero and comes up over the shoulder and the back neck. The half sleeve is open at the inside seam for about five inches and is finished by a turn-over cuff trimmed with a charmeuse loop and a button on the other side. The neck and the inside sleeve is trimmed with frills of quilted ivory malle lace. The skirt gathered round the waist is twisted round the legs very tight at the bottom. The top part is curved on the cross and turn round loose over from the bottom to the back waist. Between the two rollings of the skirt fall a piece of embroidery in mole and brick silk and round heads pass about the knee as a little short sash.

RIGHTING WRONGS TO ONE'S HAIR

Summer Sports and Habits Work Injury to the Hair Which Proper Care Now May Correct.

The general health is usually improved by the outdoor life possible in summer; and in many cases the general health is correspondingly impaired by the semi-indoor life necessary or else thought necessary in winter. The hair reflects the state of general health.

Perhaps this is the reason why most people think that summer is good for the hair. It has a life and vitality in summer and the early days of autumn which it lacks in February and March.

But if you will but not carefully the condition of your hair after the carefree summer, you will probably find that the hair itself is in a poor state. Its roots are properly nourished, because your health is good and your blood is circulating, as it should be, richly and freely in your scalp.

But isn't your hair coming out "by handfuls"? Perhaps you ascribe this to a sort of annual or perennial molt. And isn't it burned into streaks of various shades of brown or yellow or black? And isn't it crisp and brittle and split and broken? And these ills are due to the summer suns and breezes.

The Hatless Habit. It seems to be the fact that sun—long applied—is bad for the hair. Hence the hatless habit of so many in the summer is responsible for some loss of hair.

Everyone knows that sun bleaches and burns the hair—yes the hatless summer has another evil to its score. Salt water, too, is hair-destroying in its results. It makes the hair sticky and brittle. Hence, surf and sea bathing are bad for the hair.

Any water, too frequently applied, is bad for the hair. So fresh water bathing and the frequent shampoo taken to remove sea water, the dust and soot and grime of travel, and the heat of sultry days is responsible for more hair loss and trouble.

But don't be discouraged—gentle reader, not rollicking summer. Summer may do what she pleases, and she will assuredly pay us another long visit next year. But the gentle reader, with sunburned, salt-crusted, dust-brittled hair, must not be discouraged, but must go to work to put her hair back in the condition it ought to be in.

How To Do It. To begin with, give the hair a sensible, careful shampoo. Let it dry naturally in the open, shaded air. If you have an electric fan, you can quicken the drying process with this. But on no account allow your hair to be dried by one of those hair-drying hot air dryers that are the pride of many hairdressers and the ruin of so much healthy hair.

After it has dried thoroughly, rub a little oil into its roots. Vaseline, carefully rubbed in, will do, and kerosene or crude petroleum oil is better still. But whatever oil you use, rub it well into the scalp. The oil and the massage which puts it into the roots of the hair are both things your poor, abused head needs.

Rub more oil into your hair is a week, if the hair is much broken or very brittle. And continue this treatment each week until you see results in thicker and softer hair. In a month give the hair another thorough shampoo.

Velvet Hat Harmful. Don't think that because too much sun is bad for the hair, a little is not a good thing. Like pleasure or almonds or money, a little is as healthful as too much is harmful. So occasionally give the hair a short sun bath, and every day give it as much air as possible. It is a pity, from the point of view of hair health, that velvet hats are so fashionable for any sort of hat that causes the head to perspire is bad for the hair, and velvet hats surely do this.

It is a very good plan, when the hair is in poor condition, to change your way of arranging it. Often the strain caused by one way of arranging the hair eventually breaks off many of the hairs close to the head.

This is Children's Week—Sale of Children's Wear—

Every Day this Week is Children's Day at the Ellsworth Store—Every Day is a Special Sales Day this Week in the Children's Section.

We've been planning Children's Week for a Long Time—planning to fittingly introduce the New Children's Section with a Sale of Children's Wear.

This Children's Wear Sale Means Much to Mothers since it Enables them to Save Money as well as Cloth the Children Very Prettily.

The Children's Wear Department is now located in the North Annex, Second Floor. The Section is newly Finished and is Stocked with New Goods—making this South Bend's Most Complete Children's Wear Store.

Ready-to-Wear That's Right in Style and Right in Price. Ever Since the days when we First Began to Talk about New Season Wear we've Impressed the Fact that Ellsworth Coats and Ellsworth Dresses—direct from New York—are Right Every way. Now, what we've said about Ready-to-Wear for the Mothers applies to Children's Wear.

Taking Coats—for instance. Coats of Various Materials for Children, from 2 to 14 years of age. Coats in Persiana Cloth for 2 to 6-Year-Olds $8.50 to $12.50. Black Velvet Coats with White Corduroy Collars and Cuffs—sizes 2 to 6 years $12.50
